Igor Stravinsky	“The Soldier’s Tale” for violin, clarinet & piano Three pieces for solo clarinet
Béla Bartók	Romanian Folk Dances for violin, clarinet & piano
Aram Khachaturian	“Sabre Dance” for piano (four hands)
Maurice Ravel	“Tzigane” for violin & piano
Dmitri Shostakovich	Five pieces for violin, clarinet & piano

We are delighted to be welcoming Nemanja Radulović, one of the most brilliant and exciting violinists around today. Born in Serbia in 1985, he began playing the violin aged seven. At music school, the young boy was identified as having perfect pitch, and just two weeks later completed what was actually a three-year course. Despite the difficult conditions in the former Yugoslavia, the music prodigy was able to take part in European music competitions and continue his studies in Belgrade, Saarbrücken and ultimately Paris, where he worked with the likes of Dejan Mihailović, Joshua Epstein, Patrice Fontanarosa, Yehudi Menuhin and Salvatore Accardo. In 2015 Radulović won the Echo Klassik newcomer award. He has released eight albums, the last two with Deutsche Grammophon. In this “Journey east” programme, we can expect an exciting voyage through Eastern Europe as far as Russia with works by Dvořák, Bartók, Stravinsky, Shostakovich and Khachaturian. Taking direct inspiration from folklore – which even moved Frenchman Ravel to write a “virtuoso piece in the style of a Hungarian rhapsody”, this music is brimming with emotion and passion, which makes the quiet moments all the more moving.
